

Delegate Pam Queen, D-14

Delegate Pam Queen represents Legislative District 14 in Montgomery County. In Annapolis, she serves as subcommittee chair on the Economic Matters Committee and co-chair of the Economic Stability Workgroup. She champions data-driven, balanced legislation which benefits working families, supports educational initiatives, advances criminal justice reform, and promotes economic stability for all Marylanders, especially women and minorities.

When not in Annapolis, she serves as a college professor at Morgan State University (MSU). She holds a bachelor's of science degree from Tuskegee University, master degrees from Johns Hopkins University and a Ph.D. from George Washington University. At MSU, she teaches finance courses to undergraduate and graduate students; and she serves as faculty advisor of the Black Girls Vote chapter at MSU, an organization that inspires young women of color to understand and use the political process to educate and empower their selves and their community.

Her passion is to advocate for people whose voices has not been heard or understood. Her approach is to remain calm under pressure and persist. Her promise to her constituents is to always listen, learn, advocate, and act in their best interest.
